- Marketing teams

What do they NEED TO DO?

- Understand emerging cosmetic trends quickly.
 - Visualize complex consumer data in an easy, interactive way.
 - Identify top-performing brands and products.
 - Analyze consumer preferences (e.g., suitability for skin types).
 - Track how labels and rankings affect buying decisions.
 - Make data-driven product development and marketing strategies.

What do they SEE?

- Vast amounts of scattered cosmetic sales and feedback data.
- Fragmented or outdated reports.

Competitors leveraging data visualization tools.
New trends constantly changing (K-beauty, clean beauty, vegan, etc.).
Shifts in consumer behavior post-pandemic.

What do they SAY?

- " We need clear dashboards to track market trends."*
 - " It' s hard to make sense of raw data."*
 - " We want to know what consumers really care about."*
 - " We need to justify decisions with solid insights."*
 - " We' d like to see visual stories, not just spreadsheets."*

What do they DO?

- Collect and store large datasets.
 - Create basic charts and reports in Excel or older tools.
 - Manually prepare presentations for stakeholders.
 - Spend a lot of time cleaning and merging data.
 - Rely on intuition when insights are unclear.

What do they HEAR?

- From leadership: " Bring innovative, data-backed recommendations."
 - From industry: " Visualization is key to competitive advantage."
 - From peers: " Better dashboards save us time."
 - From consumers: " We want transparency and personalization."

PAINS

- Time-consuming data cleaning and reporting.
